to me

Hi Sara-

[REDACTED]

I wanted to write you during this teacher appreciation week because I want you to know how much you still serve as an inspiration and motivation for my instruction. Our year together still stands as a top moment of my teaching. A few weeks ago I was meeting with Angel and some other folks from AUSL about the junior data protocol I have rolled out and implemented. They asked how I learned this. I said you! I explained that you are still my foundation for excellent instruction that makes all kids learn and achieve. Even today, I caught myself talking about you and using so much of what you taught me. When stuck trying to figure something out for AP, I dug out your files and my hard drive to try to recreate the magic we had together. I can't believe it was so long ago while it feels so fresh and vivid to me still.

I really hope we can find a chance to get together. My schedule is a lot more flexible these days!

I also did want to share a piece of news that I don't think will surprise you: I applied and was accepted into New Leaders. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED]

[REDACTED], so hopefully one day I can woo you to come teach or work with me again!

I normally wouldn't email, but I didn't want you to hear it from anyone else except me.

All my love this week and always!
